ONE JURGE HAD A SHORT LEG HIMSELF.

Coincidence That Won Etta Kellogg Williams, Actress, Her Suit for Damages.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 17 .- The jury in the case of Etta Kellogg Williams, the actress, against the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff to the here Tuesday.

There was a very singular incident connected with the trial of the case and the finding of a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

On the jury was William Lovelace, who has one leg several inches shorter than the other.

It was known that fifteen or twenty years ago Juror Lovelace received a bruise on the hip, and no effects were felt until several years after the accident, when his leg began to shorten. The medical experts in Miss Williams's case explained that, from the blow she received on the hip, creeping or progressive paralysis would probably follow and her injuries would be permanent.

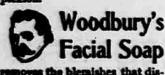

permanent.

After the jury had retired, it was evident that the jurors were of the opinion that the blow on Miss Williams's hip would probably result the same as did the inury to Juror Lovelace's hip many years ago. A ballot was taken and it was found that five of the jurors were in favor of giving the plaintiff $10,000, but after two hours, a compromise was made and they returned to the courtroom with a verdict in her favor of $5,000. The railroad company will appeal the case.

NEWS FROM EAST SIDE CITIES.

GRAND JURY PROBING "INVINCIBLES" CASE .

Edwardsville-Thirty Indictments Are Returned.

It is probable that Judge Silas Cook of the East St. Louis City Court will preside in the Madison County Circuit Court at Edwardsville next week. Judge Hartzell, who is holding court there, announced Wednesday afternoon that the change is being considered, as there are a number of cases in the East St. Louis court which call for a hearing by another Judge.

Late Wednesday afternoon the Grand Jury, which has been at work for over a month.

Judge.

Late Wednesday afternoon the Grand Jury, which has been at work for over a month, brought in a partial report. The body has been at work upon the famous Bottom case of the "Invincibles," and the evidence of twenty-five witnesses has been heard. No mention of the matter was made in the partial report, but it is expected to be heard from in the next report, which will probably be the latter part of this week.

"Not a true bill" was the report in the cases of Charles Perry, charged with assault with intent to kill, and C. A. Ziess, crime against nature.

Thirty indictments were returned. Eight were withheld by Prosecuting Attorney R. J. Brown, for the arrest of the parties. The others were as follows: Andrew Anderson, wife abandonment; Elmer and Edward Treadway, larceny; Henry Wellenkamp, assault with deadly weapon; Robert I. Loden, assault to kill and murder; James Whalen, attempt to commit burglary; Edward Meyers, burglary; Charles Whitney and Charles Wheatley, larceny; Henry Moore, attempt to kill and murder; James Whalen, larceny; Mollie Bates and James Simms, assault with deadly weapon; Charles Jell, assault to kill and murder; Henry Moore, assault with deadly weapon; Charles Jell, assault to kill and murder; John J. Ward, assault to kill and murder; John J. Ward, assault to kill and murder; John Madden and Julius Kraemer, assault with deadly weapon; Edward and Elmer Treadway, burglary; Daniel Hardy, larceny; Maggie Kruger, assault with deadly weapon.

THREE GAMBLING-HOUSES RAIDED St. Louis Gamblers Cannot Operate in

St. Louis Gamblers Cannot Operate in East St. Louis.

St. Louis gamblers who visited East St.
Louis recently came to the conclusion that the East Side town presented opportunities for gathering in the shekels that St. Louis did not, and made arrangements to open a series of games in various parts of the town. The games were in operation a day when the Police Department, on orders from Chief of Police Hauss, closed them.
The gamblers secured suites of rooms,
some of them in the heart of the city.
These were fitted up luxuriously. Keno and faro layouts were placed alongside roulette wheels, and, as a side issue, there were poker and craps tables. Singleton Cave, a well-known gambler, presided at one of the downtown games. This game was on the second floor of a house at the corner of Broadway and Main street, the lower floor of which is used for a saloon. There were other games about town.

Early Tuesday afternoon the word went around quietly that the Police Department had received instructions to close every game in East St. Louis. Tuesday night the gamblers did not open their places in East St. Louis. The expected raid materialized and policemen visited every place where games had been run, but none were found open. Wednesday morning the gamblers sought the reason for the closing. They received the answer that running a gambling game, or even gambling, was against the laws of the State and that the police would see to it that there would be no violations of the law in East St. Louis.

Many Witnesses Are Examined at East St. Louis Threatens to Deprive Winstanley Residents of Public Utilities.

At the village election at Winstanley Park

At the village election at Winstanley Park Tuesday the proposition to annex the village of Winstanley Park to the city of East St. Louis was defeated by an overwhelming vote. Measures of retaliation are proposed by not a few prominent citizens of East St. Louis.

The village of Winstanley Park adjoins the city of East St. Louis on the east, and there has been much agitation of late in favor of taking the village into the corporate limits of East St. Louis. Many East St. Louisans would build their residences in the village of it were inside the city limits. The village residents have the benefit of the East St. Louis electric light plant, the City Water Company and the City Library, besides the occasional demand for police and sometimes frequent demand for police and sometimes frequent demand for ire protection.

Wednesday morning a prominent member of the East St. Louis Library Board, who asked that his name not be used until action was taken by the board, announced that he was in favor of refusing to issue any more of the books of the East St. Louis Public Library to the residents of the village. The library is kept up by taxation of East St. Louisans, and it is unjust, says this member of the board, to allow the citzens of the village to use the books and not force them to contribute to the support of the library.

Louis Golike, the Commissioner, was honored with the presidency.

The only other officer to select was the treasurer. Both the other two Commissioners, Slocum and Harrison, wanted the office. The vote stood one and one, Clerk Wightman not being entitled to vote, and President Golike, on account of being a new member, refusing to cast the deciding vote. Every ballot was only a repetition of the first, except that as the balloting proceeded each roll call was preceded by a longer argument. The minutes accumulated into hours and still the deadlock remained. Finally a unanimous vote was made to adjourn for dinner. The three Commissioners refreshed themselves, and at 1 o'clock again repaired to the Clerk's office and continued the deadlock.
